A Brush with Death

A Brush with Death, the podcast of the National Funeral Directors' Association in America, is designed to help funeral professionals be more responsive to the evolving needs of families and looks at the issues shaping the funeral industry.

In each episode, host Gabriel Schauf talks to a guest with knowledge and experience to share on a variety of specialist subjects. The podcast began in September 2019 and, to date, there are eleven episodes to listen to.

Previous episodes include The Cost of Caring, where guest speaker Jason Troyer talks about how working in the death care profession can lead to burnout and compassion fatigue. More recent subjects have addressed how businesses can embrace new ideas and technologies in times of adversity, and in what way the impact of COVID-19 is affecting both individual and cultural grieving, reinforcing the importance of the funeral director in times of mass fatalities.
